Car bursts into flames on Whirlaway

Owner moves burning vehicle away from home

The front tires blew up on a vehicle that caught fire Sunday morning in Thoroughbred Estates, but fortunately for its owner the car did not.

Lawrenceburg firefighters were called to 3126 Whirlaway Lane after a 2008 Kia owned by Danny Walker caught fire in the driveway.

Lawrenceburg Fire Chief Robert Hume said the car was destroyed in the blaze, which was likely caused by a motor that ran the car's anti-locking braking system (ABS).

"The ABS system was running constantly and ran his battery down," Hume said. "He called someone to have it jump started and when they got ready to get in, they noticed fire coming from that area, so I assume that the ABS system shorted out."

Hume said the vehicle was parked close to Walker's home when it burst into flames.

"He actually got into the car when it was on fire," Hume said. "He backed it away from the house, and it's a good thing that he did."

Questioned about the safety of trying to move a vehicle whose front end was engulfed in flames, Hume said unlike in the movies and on TV, cars rarely explode.

"During a lifetime of firefighting, I've never seen one explode," said Hume. "Tires will blow, but as far as gas tanks I've seen cars burn up completely and not explode.

"It looks good on TV, and it certainly makes people concerned, but I've never seen it happen."

Hume said part of the reason cars don't often explode is the way they are built.

"They used to have solid metal tanks, which were more like a bomb," Hume said. "Now there are new designs with rubber gas lines and plastic tank caps, which usually just melt."

Hume said no one was injured in the fire.

Lawsuit says coach called injured wrestler 'crybaby,' twisted broken leg

District says even if true, suit should be dismissed

By Ben Carlson
News staff

The father of an Anderson County school student claims that a middle school assistant wrestling coach called his son a "crybaby" and twisted his broken leg after the child was injured during a practice.

William Agee, the boy's father, is suing the school district, middle school and then-coach Travis York for compensatory and punitive damages from an incident that occurred in November 2011 during a middle school wrestling practice.

The lawsuit was filed in November of 2012, and a hearing was scheduled for Tuesday afternoon in Anderson Circuit Court. That hearing was postponed.

The lawsuit contends that the wrestler who injured Agee's son used an illegal move while the two wrestled during a practice, causing a spiral fracture to his left tibia.

The lawsuit contends that while Agee's son screamed in pain, instead of coming onto the mat to render aid an unnamed assistant coach "called him a crybaby" and "twisted his injured leg."

The suit further contends that Agee's son's injury was made worse when unnamed people at the practice tried to pull him off the mat.

Agee's son might have a

The odds of a Boy Scout reaching the rank of Eagle Scout are roughly 2-in-100.

The odds of three boys from the same family doing so? Incalculable.

But that's just what the three sons of Dr. Keith and Delwin Jacoby have achieved.

"I don't know the odds, but this is the first time I know of in this community and I've been serving as scoutmaster for more than 20 years," said Scoutmaster Kevin Cox. "I don't know of any time there has been three Eagle Scouts from the same family."

Home again, this time for good

Anderson County soldier braves rough winter weather to reunite with his family

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

After almost a year apart from her husband, Jackie Black only needed to wait a few more hours before they were finally reunited for the holidays.

The wife of 1st Sgt. John Black of Anderson County, Jackie arrived at Capital City airport at about 11:45 a.m. on Dec. 21 to welcome her husband home as he arrived in Frankfort after nearly a year's deployment to Afghanistan with the National Guard.

But winter weather and high winds delayed John's arrival, she said, as well as about the arrival of 40 other soldiers flying in with the Agribusiness Development Team #4.

One flight finally came in around 2:30 p.m., she said, but John's flight arrived at about 5 p.m., five hours late.

"It was kind of a long, anxious day for all the families with the soldiers coming in," Jackie said in a phone interview a few weeks later, recalling her emotional wait in the aviation building at the Frankfort airport.

The Guard unit departed for Afghanistan from Frankfort in late January 2012 to teach agribusiness skills in an effort to rebuild the Afghan economy.

Some soldiers, like Anderson County's Colby Elliott, arrived home early this fall. Jackie said John came home for a brief visit in June before heading back to Afghanistan.

Jackie said she got to the hanger early; she wanted to see John's plane touch down on the runway.

"This time when he landed, he was going to be home for good," she said.

John (who Jackie described as not being able to sit still for long) is already working on plans to build a garage and plans to return back to work full-time with the National Guard at the end the month, she said.

"I guess his mom said it was the perfect Christmas present, knowing he was going to be home," she said.

Twenty-six Kentuckians will serve as voting delegates during the business session of the annual meeting.

They will join their counterparts from across the nation in debating and adopting policies on key national issues. Kentucky's priority issues include the federal government's fiscal policy, a national farm bill, environmental regulations, and farm labor reform.

Vaughn pleads guilty to synthetic pot charge

From staff reports

Craig Vaughn, former owner of Herbal Awakenings, pleaded guilty to charges resulting from a February 2012 bust for synthetic marijuana, a substance illegal to sell or possess in Anderson County.

Vaughn

Vaughn appeared before Judge Donna Dutton on Jan. 3 in Anderson County District Court and pleaded guilty to one misdemeanor count of drug paraphernalia — deliver/manufacture and to a second count of "any misdemeanor not covered by these codes."

He was sentenced to an 18-month probation to be served concurrently with the second misdemeanor sentence.

Conditions of Vaughn's probation include being subject to contempt of court, payment of $1,303 cash to the Anderson Drug Intervention Fund, and the forfeiture of unused personal property seized to be given to the Lawrenceburg police department for destruction or disposition, according to County Attorney Bobbi Jo Lewis.

According to the forfeiture order, personal property such as $1,125 cash, a black box containing tax records, about 200 wrapped pieces of glasswork, a digital recording box, a vaporizer and a copy of a computer's hard drive were returned to Vaughn.

Lewis said via e-mail that none of the items returned to Vaughn were associated with illegal activity.

Vaughn also cannot be associated with the operation of any Anderson County business and cannot be issued a business license in Anderson County for the next five years, according to Lewis.

If any term of the probation were to be violated, Vaughn's 18-month probation would turn into a six-month jail sentence.

Vaughn was arrested a little less than a month after the Anderson County Fiscal Court unanimously voted to ban fake pot and bath salts within county limits in January 2012.

Gov. Steve Beshear later signed an emergency measure in April 2012, effectively amending Kentucky's drug trafficking law to include various classes of synthetic marijuana, according to Kentucky revised statute.

"The lessons learned and skills taught in scouting remain with an individual for life. It takes determination and dedication to make it through the ranks to Eagle Scout.

"As our boys got older, there were many other obligations, and distractions, including sports, girls and cars, and it would have been very easy for the boys to get sidetracked."

Cox is no stranger to helping his scouts achieve Eagle status, saying he and troop committee chairman Robert Shearer have had at least 20 Eagle Scouts during their years together.

"Robert has been instrumental in making sure these things happen," Cox said, adding that it has been gratifying to watch so many of his scouts reach scouting's highest level.

"It's a vote of confidence from the parents," he said. "They have entrusted their children to you, and it's good to have that relationship with the families.

permanent limp as a result of his injuries, according to the lawsuit. He can now run, but not without pain.

The lawsuit also contends that another wrestler was injured by the same wrestler who injured Agee's son.

It contends that the wrestler used an illegal choke hold, causing another wrestler to lose conciousness. Then, instead of ordering that wrestler from the mat, coaches told Agee's son to wrestle him.

Although then-coach York is being sued, the lawsuit does not make any direct allegations against him and does not name others allegedly involved in the incident.

The school district's attorney filed a motion Dec. 28 to have the lawsuit dismissed by claiming that, even if the allegations are true, the district and middle school have government immunity against such suits.

City council OKs cheaper water rates to help lure industry

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

New jobs plus increased city water use equals economic growth for Lawrenceburg.

That's the proposed formula behind a new ordinance unanimously passed by the city council last Friday during a special-called meeting, effective immediately.

The ordinance, whose purpose is "stimulating the creation of new jobs and commercial development within the community," authorizes Mayor Edwinna Baker to enter into an agreement offering savings in city water service in exchange for potential job growth.

"I'm hoping this will encourage people to look at Lawrenceburg," Baker said. "I think it's a good thing the council voted to do this."

Existing water customers and new industries wishing to expand or relocate in Lawrenceburg can now qualify to receive an economic development rate to be applied to a portion of their water bill.

This agreement, which will vary from customer to customer, would establish a specific rate for a certain volume of water used by the business. That rate then would only include the city's variable cost, or realized expenses when producing additional volumes of water.

In exchange for this rate, any business must file an initial report with the council explaining its plans to increase permanent, minimum-wage jobs in Lawrenceburg.

The number of jobs this would create for Lawrenceburg, however, depends on the individual agreement between water customer and the city, according to Connie Allen, an engineer with Salt River Engineering in Harrodsburg who assisted the city with its 2011 cost of service study regarding the economic development rate.

A hypothetical rate agreement between the city and a local business, Allen said in an e-mail interview, may require a business to introduce a minimum of 50 additional jobs physically performed within the Lawrenceburg water service area.

Another rate agreement scenario may require a business to provide at least four new jobs per 1 million gallons of average monthly water demand beyond the business' usual monthly water use.

"The savings are directly related to how much water [businesses] use," Allen said via e-mail. "A wet industry will realize a significant benefit; a dry one, not so much."

The rate agreement will also depend upon the capacity of the city's water plant.

According to Danny Riley, assistant supervisor of the city's water treatment facility, the Lawrenceburg water plant produces about 2.3 million gallons of water a day, meeting about 58 percent of its maximum daily capacity. Maximum water production capacity for the plant is about 4 million gallons a day.

Wild Turkey distillery, a city water customer with a high water use that plans to relocate a bottling facility in Lawrenceburg, currently uses about 300,00 gallons of water a day, City Clerk Robbie Hume said.

"That's the whole reason why this EDR is possible," Hume said of the plant's water capacity. "We have capacity built in to the current rate structure."

Including the initial jobs creation information, an annual report detailing any capital investments, as well as any increase or decrease in employment, will also be required by the city during the length of the agreement.

Agreements cannot exceed five years, the ordinance states, but they may be reviewed and renewed for a single extension for no more than five years.

The ordinance spells out conditions for the city to follow as well.

The city must demonstrate that other water customers will be no worse off if other businesses receive the economic development rate.

To do so, the city will need to show an absence of any future subsidy for other customers and that any business or industry receiving an economic development rate will not eat into more than 20 percent of the treatment plant's reserve capacity.

The city must recoup any fixed costs — the overall expense accrued in the cost of producing water, regardless of volume, and any additional step costs — upfront or as part of a minimum bill payment from the water customer upon entering the rate agreement.

If the city discovers it does not have adequate capacity to meet anticipated growth, it can unilaterally rescind the rate agreement with a water customer, according to the ordinance.

The ordinance states that the mayor may designate another individual to enter into rate agreements with water customers, but Mayor Baker said she would most likely not designate anyone for that responsibility during her term in office.

Instead of writing a ticket, police officer wins keys to new car

Fake traffic stop ends in free $40K Mustang for Corley

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

City Police Officer Michael Corley stood in the pouring rain after he pulled over the driver of a Ford Mustang the Thursday morning before Christmas.

It was a routine traffic stop, nothing more.

Little did Corley know that Mustang would become his new Christmas gift.

"I was pretty clueless until they handed me the keys," Corley, who recently won a Mustang through the "Battle for Your Mustang" contest, said. "I did not recognize it; I did not recognize the car. I thought it was a legit traffic stop."

Corley had entered Ford's Mustang online giveaway back in June, not giving much thought to his entry. He said he took only a few minutes to design his white 2013 Ford Mustang GT, and then forgot all about the giveaway.

"It was just a contest to enter," Corley, who has been working with the city police department for about five years, said. "If I see something like that online, I'll enter it. This time it definitely paid off."

About 300,000 people applied for the Mustang drawing as part of Ford's Mustang Customizer website, according to Jason Follebout, account lead for the Mustang website and a representative from the Ford Motor Company.

Users customized their dream Mustang online, then shared their designs on social networks, commented on other cars, battled or challenged other vehicles online through Ford's Battle Mode in order to receive more points and a better chance at being drawn for the giveaway, Follebout said.

Four lucky winners were selected at random; Corley's Mustang was the third giveaway of the year with one more Mustang to be awarded in February, Follebout said.

Lawrenceburg police officers, as well as Ford Motor company representatives, set up Corley with a fake traffic stop Dec. 20 to surprise him with a new Ford Mustang valued at more than $40,000.

The Mustang will be Corley's personal vehicle, not the property of the Lawrenceburg police department.

Although Corley said Ford contacted him in September to inform him that he was a finalist, he did not recognize the make or model of the vehicle that came over the police scanner.

Corley said he was riding with Chief Chris Atkins at the time, and was told to investigate a driver of a white Ford Mustang who was test driving the car, but hadn't returned to the car dealership.

When he got out of his squad car to talk to the driver, Corley still didn't know what was happening.

Then the camera crew came out, and Corley put two and two together.

"Oh yeah, especially around Christmas," Corley said when asked if he was excited to win the Mustang. "Good Christmas present."

Corley said his dad, who owned a few '60s models of the Mustang, "looked over it pretty good."

No one has asked to borrow the Mustang yet, Corley said, but plenty of people have asked for a ride.

Chandler's final vote comes as no surprise

Questioning logic that recycling building will save you money

Column as I see 'em ...

Ben Chandler must have gone to bed the evening of Nov. 6 wondering what in the world went wrong after losing so badly in his effort to remain in Congress.

Ben Carlson
Publisher

Fast forward to his Jan. 2 fiscal cliff vote to increase the deficit by $4 trillion and it's safe to say he still hasn't figured it out.

Oh, that vote also raised taxes on the middle class due to its failure to retain a so-called payroll tax holiday. And you thought everyone from Obama to Chandler to McConnell meant it when they said they would protect the middle class, didn't you?

That Chandler supported the so-called fiscal cliff deal is no surprise; that he still apparently doesn't understand why he lost to Andy Barr is not.

Barr, who nearly captured the seat two years earlier, shattered Chandler's Blue Dog Democrat image by continuously harping on his support for devastating EPA regulations on coal and his refusal to vote to defund Obama Care.

Using campaign rhetoric that sounded like an amalgam of a Rush Limbaugh monologue and a Fox News appearance by Sarah Palin, Barr was able to connect with a majority of actual Blue Dogs in the 6th Congressional District, the noted exception being the uber-liberal enclaves in Lexington that this time weren't large enough to keep Chandler in power.

Chandler's decline started long before he lost to Barr. He lost considerable support in Anderson County — and certainly in other areas outside of liberal Lexington — when he supported Obama over Hillary for president in 2008.

The electorate delivered that message in 2010 when Chandler edged Barr by a few hundred votes, but apparently Chandler wasn't listening. In 2012 he was forced to listen and was sent home to Woodford County.

His support for Obama continued, including voting yes for so-called cap and trade legislation that, although never officially enacted, has been particularly hard on big coal and everyone — including you — whose electricity is generated by coal.

In case you were wondering that's why your electric bills have jumped better than 25 percent in the past several years.

But more than anything the message Chandler apparently never understood from an increasingly displeased electorate is that they don't accept the notion that the federal government should spend trillions of dollars it doesn't have.

The electorate delivered that message in 2010 when Chandler edged Barr by a few hundred votes, but apparently Chandler wasn't listening.

In 2012 he was forced to listen and was sent home to Woodford County, which, like Anderson, supported Barr in fairly convincing fashion.

It's only fitting that the final act of consequence in Chandler's congressional career would be to increase taxes and spend trillions of dollars without a single meaningful reduction in spending.

It's even more fitting that the voters in the 6th District saw fit to make sure that doing so was indeed his final act.

Speaking of taxes ... there's a line of logic being kicked around that taxpayers will save money if the county constructs a new recycling building rather than enact mandatory trash and recycling.

Here's what's being said: Mandatory recycling will cost property owners around $2 a month. Multiplied by the number of residences, that comes out to around $250,000 a year, depending on whose math is used.

Conversely, the one-time expense of a recycling building — it was supposed to cost $325,000 but that price has already more than doubled — would prove much cheaper in the long run.

Here's the problem with that logic.

First, it discounts all other costs aside from the building, including additional labor, equipment purchases and expansion, all of which will go on in perpetuity.

Second, every dollar spent on recycling will take away funds from much more serious infrastructure needs that will still have to be addressed, which at some point is going to require a property tax increase beyond the "compensating rate."

Third, and here's the biggie, the $250,000 annual cost for mandatory recycling will be pumped into a private company that hires at least some local workers who pay payroll taxes, property taxes and spend their wages at local businesses. Also, that company pays a hefty chunk of its receipts to the county and city government.

And, best of all, that $250,000 will be kept out of the hands of government, which already takes enough, thank you.

State of children poor, in numbers

Numbers can wound or heal depending on how you wield them.

Meaghan Downs
Staff writer

One of the side effects of working as a reporter includes thousands numbers tangling themselves into piles of paper stored into file folders in what I consider to be the organized chaos of my desk: salary figures, test score percentiles, ages, birthdays, funeral services, election returns and meeting dates, to name a few.

Numbers have always been important when it comes to reporting news.

The greater the number, the bigger the story.

Recently, another kind of number found its way to my computer screen in the release of the Kids Count Data Book report for 2012.

The Kids Count Data Book is sponsored through the Annie E. Casey foundation, an organization that is "dedicated to helping build futures for disadvantaged children in the United States."

The report's intent, according to its website at datacenter.kidscount.org if you want to take a look, is to report up-to-date indicators of child's well-being across the country, breaking down numbers per state and for each community.

It lists numbers such as household medium income, children enrolled in Medicaid, children eligible for free and reduced meals, culled and collected by the Kentucky Youth Advocates, Inc., from reports from the Department of Education, Kentucky Council on Postsecondary Education Comprehensive database and the U.S. Census Bureau, and other agencies.

In its raw and unprocessed state, these numbers could be vulnerable to manipulation, or to be completely ignored as

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Obama, others set bad example

To the editor:

The tragedy at Sandy Hook Elementary School brought out the usual hypocrisy on Capitol Hill and in the White House.

Politicians pointed fingers at everybody and everything but the contribution their bad examples make to such tragedies.

During their so-called "fiscal cliff" showdown, the juvenile conduct displayed by President Obama, other Democrats and the Republicans was not over a solution. Their childlike haggle was over a tiny fraction of the needed solution.

Given their examples, it is no wonder that record-breaking numbers must be used to announce the number of food-stamp recipients, home foreclosures, personal bankruptcies, high school dropouts and inmates in prison.

How small was that fraction? Their fiscal-cliff deal will add $11 trillion to our debt over the next decade. During those 10 years, the cost of interest on our debt will equal half of what is spent on Social Security provided the interest rate we pay does not go up, and, if income tax rates do not increase, Kentuckians will still pay 49.1 percent of every dollar they earn for federal and state taxes, not counting local or indirect taxes.

With some of the old incumbents in Congress, upright and responsible conduct apparently went out of style with pointed-toe shoes. "Such old-fashioned principles are for turkeys, man. Get with the music. Make love, not war."

Consequently, politicians from the flower-child period appear to have no problem with turning a blind eye to illegal emigrants, thumbing their noses at our Constitution, disregarding sworn oaths, building bridges and highways to nowhere, spending our tax dollars to pander voters, engaging in for-profit wars, covering up tragic consequences spawned by their incompetence in such outrages as "Fast and Furious" and the disgrace at Benghazi.

By any measure, their unsavory, self-serving acts constitute bad examples.

Given their examples, it is no wonder that record-breaking numbers must be used to announce the number of food-stamp recipients, home foreclosures, personal bankruptcies, high school dropouts and inmates in prison. The list of negatives they are partly or wholly responsible for can fill pages, and one item listed among those pages would be the simmering frustration that contributes a lion's portion of responsibility to such tragedies as Oklahoma, Tucson and Sandy Hook.

To be fair, it isn't fair to paint the whole of Congress with the same critical brush. Many of our politicians are well-meaning and still retain the ability and will to recognize right from wrong.

Two examples are senators Tom Coburn of Oklahoma and our own Rand Paul. Their words and deeds are consistent; and honest, candid, and commonsensical fit them like a glove.

It is reasonable to assume that there are many others who share their code of ethics from their seats of anonymity in the back rows of Congress. Only honest and oath-driven leadership can make their presence known and use their knowledge and skills for the betterment of America and Americans.

Imagine all the good our elected politicians could do for America if they would simply present a proper example for youth to emulate, and that good would not cost any lives or a single tax dollar.

Christmas meal a success

To the editor:

We would like to thank everyone who prepared and donated food, their time and prayers to make Christmas Day at Open Hands Pantry a huge success and blessing.

It is because of Walmart's donations, Kroger and all the churches and people who were involved — too many to mention for the fear of leaving someone out we were able to feed 440 meals on that day.

If you have never been involved in this ministry on Christmas Day we suggest you take time out give it a try; we guarantee you will leave there blessed or maybe a different person.

We are only able to pull this off because of donations that are given to us and we take donations throughout the year to make this meal happen on Christmas Day. If you would like to give a donation toward this ministry please contact our treasurer, Doug Haddix at502-598-9297 or June Byrne at 502-604-1255.

Thanks again, and may God richly bless you.

Remedies to keep your vehicle free of ice

Well we've made it to the season of "ahh." The holidays are over and we start to settle back in to some kind of routine. Our days and nights are calmer. The decorations are back in their boxes and all the trash has finally been picked up. Now, we just have to get through winter.

Cheryl Steenerson
Columnist

That means dealing with whatever Mother Nature sends our way. My truck is parked outside in the open, normally up on the almost top of the hill. Frost is an everyday occurrence, so I scrape a lot. I don't like to start and run the truck, just so it can thaw out. It wastes a lot of gas. I do have to admit to loving a warm vehicle, though.

I do have wind protection from the west and south, which are the prevailing winds here. That helps tremendously. Regardless, it still gets pretty chilly up here and when starting the truck on a cold winter morning, I can hear the battery struggle and it's only a year old.

Keeping your vehicle out in the cold is hard on it and I just think having a garage or cover could add a year to the life of the battery. That extra year saves me money.

Not having to stand outside in the cold, scraping the windows, would save me time as well. I like saving both time and money, so I started doing a little research on car covers, or truck covers in my case.

Turns out you can get a nifty custom made cover, guaranteed for four years, for as little as $130. That works out to about $30 for the entire winter. The top of the line covers are in the $300 range with a five year guarantee.

I'd want to call them to ask them a few more questions before I popped for one of them, though. Like, how much does it weigh? If this thing weighs 40 pounds when it's dry, it may be a bit tough to sling around on my own. If it's wet went I take it off, will it freeze like a Popsicle? I want to learn more. In the meantime, I have a few other techniques to trick the cold.

Big pieces of cardboard laid over the windshield keeps the frost off. Sheets, stretched across the windshield and closed in the doors do the same. Preventing the ice with liquid sprays are another tool. You can buy ready made stuff, or you can make you own.

Making you own means mixing three parts white vinegar to one part water in a spray bottle and spraying before the frost starts to form on your windows. If you don't get out there before the frost, just wait until morning and break out the alcohol.

Rubbing alcohol, or 70 percent isopropyl alcohol, with a drop of liquid dish soap, sprayed liberally onto a thickly frosted window will de-ice it. You can also add isopropyl alcohol to your windshield fluid (50/50 mix) and this will keep the wiper lines from freezing up.

While you're out there working on your vehicle, be sure to check all the regular stuff like tire pressure, oil, brake fluid, antifreeze and your battery. Take the cooking oil out with you to rub onto the rubber door liners again.

This keeps your doors from freezing shut.

Being able to open the truck door when it's 15 degrees outside is a good thing.

Not having to scrape windows, before and after work, is a good thing. Realizing that we only have 71 more days until spring is a great thing. Now, get out there. The sooner you get this done the sooner you can get back in the warm house and say, "Ahh."

Happy growing.

Hoarding is more than sad TV show

Joan Martin
Guest columnist

Compulsive hoarding is a health condition that has received much attention from the media in recent years. However, hoarding is not always easy to detect and may be more widespread than many believe.

Compulsive hoarding can be secretive. An individual can discreetly accumulate items over many years. Sometimes hoarding is discovered only when the individual is no longer able to live in their own home or the family cleans the home following the loved one's death.

The condition is also more widespread than many expect. An estimated 5 percent of the U.S. population suffers from compulsive hoarding behaviors. The problem is much more than just being a "pack-rat." Hoarding can seriously threaten the health and finances of the sufferers and their families. The issue becomes even more difficult when sufferers do not realize pages and pages of numbers wash over you.

Do not go gentle into that state of your eyes glazing over. Resist the urge.

Because there's one statistic that's not too small to be beneath our concern: Anderson County's child poverty rate.

Across the state, Kentucky has a 26.1 percent child poverty rate, so a little more than 1 in 4 kids live in poverty.

Not the highest in the nation, but still, a few percent points above the national average of 23 percent.

Anderson County's child poverty level — lower than the state average at 18.4 percent — rose 1.7 percent in a single year.

Now, 1.7 percent doesn't sound like much.

But these are our county's children, under the age of 18, who live in families with incomes below the federal poverty level. And if we can trust the data presented, that number is increasing.

Breaking it down further, the annual poverty level in 2011 (the most recent year for data) for a family of two adults and two children was $22,811 and lower.

The average median household income of a single Anderson County household, according to this data release? $52,660 per household.

The discrepancy between the median household income and the percentage of our county's children living in poverty seems alarming to me.

Perhaps I m just naïve enough to still be saddened.

If there's any word on my lips these days, it's why.

Why are about 2 in every 11 children living in poverty in this county when the median annual income of our residents average more than twice the federal poverty level?

Unemployment in Anderson County, at least, has decreased. The number of students considered to be college and career ready is holding strong.

I suspect my answers can't be explained away by numbers. But I don't want to shrug my shoulders. Move on to the next sad statistic.

Unless you, the readers, have any suggestions beyond fixating on that 18. 4 percent.

What community organizations are you a part of that helps the children poor in Anderson County? What are you doing to alleviate poverty in the community?

Do you have stories to share about what can be done to change this poverty statistic? I'd love to hear them.

Because I do know one thing: numbers do help. But I never underestimate the power of stories.

that their compulsion is a serious problem.

Hoarding is usually characterized by these behaviors:

Excessively collecting items. The items can be free or purchased. The hoarder may spend many hours acquiring things. Getting these items makes the person feel excited, and leaving the items makes him/her feel anxious.

Not discarding items. The sufferer may feel discomfort at the idea of discarding any of their possessions. Even damaged items may still be perceived as useful.

Clutter interferes with everyday living. It may be difficult to move about the house or perform daily tasks. Residents of the home may stop eating at the table or sleeping in their beds in order to accommodate the clutter.

There are negative effects of having too much stuff. Having a mass of possessions is a big safety risk. Hoarding puts families in danger of fire or injury from falling objects. The clutter also makes it difficult to clean, so the house may become unsanitary as the hoard prevents timely removal of waste. If the home becomes unsafe, protective services may become involved to ensure that everyone is taken care of until the problem is solved.

A significant problem resulting from compulsive hoarding is that the sufferer may become socially isolated. Embarrassment will lead people to shy away from letting friends or relatives see the inside of the house. Conflicts with family can arise when the sufferer cannot part with mountains of possessions.

Hoarding also causes great financial strain. Excessive shopping for "treasures" can burden a bank account, making it difficult to pay bills or purchase necessities. A heavily crowded home will likely be in violation of fire codes and city ordinances. A renter may face eviction, and a homeowner may endure fines and court fees. Additionally, this disorder can impair a person's ability to remain employed, which further reduces resources.

Help is available for someone who is a hoarder. Compulsive hoarding is considered a mental health condition possibly related to Obsessive Compulsive Disorder (OCD). However, more recent research presents the possibility that it is related to other mental health conditions. Effective therapy may, however, be sought from a professional trained in treating OCD-related disorders. To find a qualified professional near you, contact: The Obsessive Compulsive Foundation http://www.ocfoundation.org/hoarding/

While I can help with household organization questions, I am not qualified to help someone who is a hoarder. Someone who wants help getting organized can call my office for recommendations. Sixth graders thank senior citizens for sharing stories, advice

Editor's note: Students in Mrs. Jennifer Johnson's sixth grade literacy class at the Anderson County Middle School read a story titled "Notes from the Midnight Driver." The book is about a teenage boy who breaks the law and, as punishment, is assigned community service at a nursing home. His assigned resident is a very grumpy man; however, as the book progresses the two characters discover they have several things in common and in the end become good friends.

As a culminating activity, Johnson took her students to the Anderson County Senior Citizens Center to interview seniors and spend time playing games and making crafts. "As a result, students discover interesting facts about local senior citizens," Johnson said via e-mail. "Students also learn there are commonalities across generations.

"For five years, Debbie Lottes and the senior citizens of the center have graciously allowed the students to visit them after reading the book."

Following are several letters constructed by the students thanking the seniors for allowing them to visit.

Dear Ms. Clark,

Thank you so much for letting me come visit and meet you. You are my favorite person I met. Also thank you for telling me about your life. You are such a good influence to me. Your kids and grandkids are so lucky to have such a good mom and grandma.

My favorite thing you told me about was how you would play ball, marbles, and jump rope for fun. The reason this is my favorite is because my friends and I do the same thing! I think it's really cool that we have that in common. I feel like I have a new friend.

Something about me is that I love to sing. When I was younger I sang at talent shows and fairs and I won! I'm in choir at my school. I'm really excited because on Dec.11, I have a concert at my school.

Sincerely,
Savana Akers

Dear Mr. Prentice,

Thank you for letting me interview you. I had a wonderful time. It was very generous of you to take time out of your day to talk with me. I hope you had fun doing so. I also hope you had a good rest of the day.

I found it interesting when you shared with me what you did for fun when you were twelve. Hiking, playing ball, and swimming all sound fun. I really like to go swimming on hot days. I also enjoyed your advice which was "business before pleasure."

The thing I like to do for fun is wrestling with my brother. It helps me practice for middle school wrestling. Last year I placed fourth in state and the year before that. I practice with my brother all the time.

Again thanks for letting me come.

Sincerely,
Joseph Taylor

Dear Ms. Elfreeda Wickizer,

I had a good time talking to you, and I will miss you so much. I like to ride my bike.

Sincerely,
Jonathan Boyatt

Dear Mr. Prentice Bryant,

Thank you for letting me interview you. I really did enjoy talking to you. I learned a lot from you and your life. Thanks again for the interview.

I loved the things you told me. It's weird how we use computers and you used textbooks. I love to play ball too; it's so fun to play with my little cousin! Your job you had sounds like fun. I think your advice you gave me is going to be helpful in the future.

Do you want to know some about me? Well, I have 1 sister who's a pain in the butt. I have several pets; I have two rabbits, six or seven goldfish, one hermit crab and one dog. My grandparents live in West Virginia and Pennsylvania. That's far away, huh? I like to play volleyball. My birthday is January 30,, 2001. My favorite color is purple. I enjoyed interviewing you a lot. Thanks so much! Hope your Christmas and New Year goes well! Have a nice winter, and stay warm! You're one amazing man!

Sincerely,
Becky Frederick

Dear Ms. Trudie,

Thank you for letting me interview you. I really enjoyed seeing you again! I think you are very kind and sweet! I hope to talk to you again soon!

Something I found very interesting is you're from Austria. I found interesting that you liked to swim, walk, and mountain climb! I'm very much like you! I love to do those things too!

Since we didn't get to talk too much about me, I would like to tell you some things about me! I'm 11. I'm the only girl in an 11-person family (besides my mom). I live on a farm and I go to the same church as you!

Sincerely,
Eve Gettelfinger

P.S. I'm keeping you in my prayers like you requested!

P.P.S. I hope you see your sister again soon!

Dear Ms. Sea,

Thank you so much for taking the time to let me interview you on Wednesday. Also, thank you for answering my questions and being so nice and sweet.

I think that it was very interesting that you worked on a farm. I have never worked on a farm before so I don't know what it is like, but one time I rode a horse at my friend's house and I had a lot of fun.

I know that I didn't get to tell you much about myself so here's some information about me. I am 11 years old and I cheer for Anderson County Middle School. I like to draw and spend time with my friends and family. I am also as sister and love animals.

Sincerely,
Maddie Wallace

Dear Ms. Elberta,

I want to thank you for letting me interview you and talk about your life. I think you are a very sweet person. Wednesday was definitely a good time to go to the center. I hope you enjoyed talking to me and my friend, Bailey.

One thing you shared with me I thought was very interesting. I like that you worked on a farm. I live in a regular neighborhood, but I love to get dirty and muddy and to ride four-wheelers! I think it's really cool that you got to crop and ride horses and things. I love horses! It's really cool that you got to hang out around farms all the time.

Here're some things about me. I'm a country girl. I love to dance (also in the rain)! I love to ride horses. Once, I rode my friend's horse, Feather; she is a fast girl, and I love her. I really wish I lived in the country, and had a horse of my own, but I'll just have to wait, because my parents are thinking about moving out to the sticks!

Sincerely,
Zoe Walker

Dear Mr. Bryant,

Thank you very much for letting us come and interview you. It was a very fun experience. It was very interesting to read the book we read and then kind of experience what it was like. I am very blessed to have shared this experience with you.

I remember you telling us that when you were in school, there was no technology. I think this is very interesting since now we use technology for many things. I think it is very neat that technology has advanced over the years.

I remember you telling us that you liked to play ball and go hiking for fun. For fun, I like to dance, shoot archery and watch TV. It is very interesting how different our ideas for fun are.

Sincerely,
Kayla West

ESSAYS

Dear Ms. Doris,
Thank you Ms. Doris for letting us interview you. I thought it was very cool to interview you. I also thought it was cool to hear about your stuff that has happened to you. And you are really open-minded.
Something I thought was cool is that you go fishing with your neighbors. What is the biggest fish you have ever caught? I think it is cool that you work for home health. I also thought it was pretty awesome that you had a man teacher for the first time. I also had a man teacher for the first time in third grade and I thought it was really cool. I also thought it was cool advice you gave us.
One think I like to do is play football. I play for the Anderson County Falcons.

Sincerely,
Ben Moore

Dear Mary Jane,
I would like to thank you for letting me come and talk with you on Monday. Also, I would like to thank you for sharing with me. I would also like to thank you for being so nice and kind to me. Lastly, I would like to thank you for being so open-minded.
I thought you telling me about the Palmer Method and how you got slapped on the hand for talking was interesting. The reason I thought this is because the teacher now aren't allowed to discipline kids that way anymore. Also, the teachers do not teacher cursive writing anymore.
Since we didn't really have enough time to talk one-on-one, I would like to tell you something about me. First, I am 11 years old and have one brother and one sister. Next, I love to play baseball every spring. Last, I am an avid hunter and go hunting any time I can.

Sincerely,
Nathan Sallee

Dear Ms. Sea,
I would like to thank you for letting me interview you. I appreciated your kindness because we were very shy to interview you.
I loved hearing the things you did as a child. I thought it was very cool that you worked on a farm. I live on a farm and have to help out a bunch, so I kinda know how it was for you when you were younger.
Since I didn't get a chance to tell you about me I will in this letter. I am 11 years old and I love to play softball. I also am obsessed with cheerleading. I am a cheerleader here at the middle school also. My birthday is on June 14, also known as Flag Day. My parents are Tonjua and Anthony Casey. I also have a sister who is married. Well enough about me. It was very nice to meet you and I hope to hear back from you.

Sincerely,
Kennedy Casey

Dear Ms. Nellie Drury,
Thank you for your time with us. I really enjoyed it. After reading "Notes from the Midnight Driver" it was nice to meet you. You are very sweet. You gave me some advice and I plan to use it.
On Wednesday you told me that I should "learn everything you can in school and college." I am the girl who sat next to you. You also complimented my handwriting. I also thought it was cool that for Christmas you used a shoebox instead of a stocking.
Something you might find interesting about me is that I have all A's and B's in school. Again, thank you for your time and advice.

Sincerely,
Lauren Yocum

Dear Mr. Herman,
Thank you, Herman, for the chance to meet and interview you. You were very kind and you taught me so much. Thank you for things you shared and told me about.
It's very cool that you have been to Alaska too, and been to 52 countries in Europe. You've been very interesting. Your grandchildren are very cute. The school you went to is also very interesting too. One grade in each room and all.
The work you did is just like my dad's. My dad works for Kentucky Agriculture too. He's the manager at the farm for KSU. I played baseball and was pretty good at it too.

Sincerely,
Kaitlyn Reed

Dear Ms. Marie,
Thank you for spending your time talking to me. I think you are a very interesting person. So, again, than you for talking to me.
First off, I am very sorry about your husband. However, it sounds like you're never lonely with two children, five grandchildren, and nine great grandchildren. Also, when you were in school, you and your classmates must have been pretty fit, with you walking more than a mile ever single day. Talking about staying in shape, I would have never guessed you were 84 years old. All those years of walking to and from school really paid off. Also, I am almost jealous that you worked on a farm. I know it's hard work, (I like a little bit of a challenge) but I've always wanted to work on a farm.
I know that by now you would like to know a little bit about me. Let's start simple. My name is Allison Hill and like you, I go to church every Sunday and Wednesday. I go to a smaller church, Freedom Baptist, down on Powell Taylor Road. We actually recently got a new pastor. If you read the paper, there was a big picture of him and his wife last week. Next, I live with my mom, Lori, my dad, Alen Tyler, and my sister, Brooklyn. I have a very loving, caring family. My mom works at ECC, and my dad works at Toyota factory in Georgetown.

Sincerely,
Allison (Alli) Hill

Dear Doris,
I would like to thank you for letting me and my friend interview you. I am glad I got to come; it was an experience for me.
When you said you had outdoor restroom, I thought to myself boy that is not like today where have ours inside. It would have been a great experience to have lived back then and watch the world change.
To tell some stuff about me I love to play sports and spend time with my family. I also love animals. I enjoy playing games and playing outside.

Sincerely,
Joshua Rousey

Dear Ms. Nellie,
Thank you for letting us come and talk to you. I had a really good time. You are a really nice person. It's not every day you get to interview someone.
It's nice to know how school has changed since you were in school. You said you worked at Heritage Hall, well, my mom worked there a while back. You also said you got married when you were in high school. Did you finish school after you got married? You also said you have four children and 13 grandchildren. That's a lot.
As you know I am in sixth grade. I am 11 years old and I go to Anderson County Middle School. I have 10 dogs, four cats, three horses, and two fish. I love them all! I have a big family too. I have 14 aunts and uncles, 23 cousins, seven nephews, one niece, and one grandparent. (That was only on my dad's side!) I live in Lawrenceburg and I am planning to live here the rest of my life.
It was nice meeting you and I hope to see you again.

Sincerely,
River Shackleford

Dear Ellreeda Wickizer,
My name is Chase Smith. I would like to thank you for talking to us. It was a good activity and it went well with the book we were reading in class.
I thought it was kind of cool how you went to a one-room school house with one teacher. I'm sure it was cramped in there if it was only one room. I also thought it was funny how you said that if you didn't get how to do something then you could pick up with the teacher taught the grade behind you.
Since there was so many of us I didn't get a chance to talk to you. So I would like to tell you a little about myself. I go to ACMS and I love sports. I play basketball and baseball.

Sincerely,
Chase Smith

Dear Ms. Marie Burns,
Thank you for giving me a wonderful experience at the Senior Center. I learned a lot about how you lived back then. It was pretty cool learning that you are from a different country also. I hope you enjoyed having us over to visit you all. I hope we can meet up again sometime.
Honestly, I think the coolest thing you told me is that you worked on a farm when you were little. That's something we have in common. I work on a farm. I have been since I was about 8 years old. I'm 11 now. I can believe all your hard work and effort you put into working all those long hours after school. I can honestly say that I know how hard it was back then without all the machines to help you on the farm. That's one thing I liked the most that you told me about.
One thing most people don't understand about me is I don't put on a country girl act like most people do. I love going back to my hometown and getting muddy on the farm. For one it doesn't bother me. I'm sure you were the same way. You most likely didn't have a choice. Well, I'm sure by the time you get here you probably want me to stop talking. So I better let you go.

Sincerely,
Natalie Nichols

Dear Ms. Tiaudi,
I want to thank you for sharing your personal life with me and my friends. I really enjoyed walking to the senior center. It was one of the most fun field trip I've had this year.
I thought it was really interesting that you are from Austria. I haven't met anyone that comes from another country. School back then I remember as you told me was very simple. There wasn't any technology or anything like that. You lived out in the country too. Swam with the fish in your pond. I once lived farther away from town, but it wasn't as far as you I'm positive. I'm really sorry that your husband passed.
My parents are divorced. I am in sixth grade, like my teacher, Mrs. Johnson, told you. I'm 12 years old, and I cheer for my school (Anderson Middle). I am in Beta Club also (something for A-B honor roll students). We do school wide projects. I hope to get to come back soon!

Sincerely,
Haley Studler

Dear Mr. Harold Cornish,
Thank you for allowing me to talk to you. I'm twelve years old and I'm good friends with your grandson, Colton Cornish. Thank for the interview.
I enjoyed the things you shared with me. I think it's funny that you don't even remember going to school. I also love to play basketball, that's why I think it's awesome that you played basketball. You had a really cool job too being in the sheriff's office. You had some nice advice too, to keep on going to school.
I've got to share with you some stuff about me now. Well, you already know I like basketball., but I also play football and baseball. I've played many sports with your grandson Colton too. I've enjoyed meeting you and I also enjoyed the interview. You're awesome.

Sincerely,
Hunter Curtsinger

School Resource Officers Joe Saunier, left, and Paul Blackhurst, right, discuss the safety security drill to be conducted Tuesday morning at Anderson County High School. Schools across the country are reviewing security plans in light of the tragic mass shooting that occurred in Newtown, Conn., that killed 20 students and several adults at Sandy Hook Elementary school.

Officers conduct lockdowns to test safety procedures

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

Following the tragic December school shooting in Newtown, Conn., many school districts across the country are beginning 2013 by re-evaluating their schools' safety procedures.

Anderson County is no exception.

School Resource Officer Joe Saunier checked the locked door of a Saffell Street Elementary classroom Tuesday morning during a lockdown, one of several drills being conducted at Anderson County schools that day.

"Kids have been doing an excellent job, everybody's quiet," Saunier, who has been a school resource officer at the Anderson County Middle School for about four years, said.

Officers walked the elementary wings and hallways, checking doors and waiting for no response when they shouted words like "sheriff" through the door.

Saunier said each classroom was instructed not to answer the door at all, even if someone says they are with the police department.

It's small things like that, Saunier said, that they'll be looking to improve as schools review their security measures.

School Resource Officer Paul Blackhurst, who works at Anderson County High School, said not all situations can be avoided, but conducting safety drills like the one at Saffell Street Elementary are important to get people thinking.

"All we're trying to do is get people aware of the possibility," Blackhurst said as he left Saffell to perform the next security drill at the high school, "get people thinking about 'what if?'"

School officials and local law enforcement, EMS, city and county fire departments, as well as the Kentucky State Police, were scheduled to meet last week, according to Anderson County Superintendent Sheila Mitchell, to provide feedback and perform school safety assessments.

Representatives from city, county and state police assisted in conducting Tuesday's safety drills as well as Mitchell, Saffell Street Principal Robin Arnzen, City Fire Chief Robert Hume and Director of Student Services Derek Shouse.

All schools, Mitchell said via e-mail, have been asked to review current safety procedures with their "front line" office staff and teachers.

As of press time, photo identification is not mandatory to enter a school building or attend a school-related function, but may be asked for photo ID prior to entering a facility.

"Photo IDs are required to be shown at schools when school staff do not know the individual visiting or picking up the students," Mitchell said.

Visitors to Anderson County schools are required, she said, to enter the building through the front doors and sign in at the office to receive a visitor sticker.

Side and rear doors are being monitored throughout the day to ensure they are being locked, Mitchell said.

Some, but not all, Anderson County public schools possess a buzzer system at the front door of the building to control who is permitted to enter the school building.

A few administrators such as Saffell Street principal Robin Arnzen requested quotes on purchasing a buzzer system, Mitchell said, but it's still to be determined if that expense, or other safety changes, will be funded by individual schools' site-based councils or the Board of Education.

"Once the assessments are complete and suggestions are ready to be discussed, a scheduled meeting will take place with the team to review ways we can improve for the safety of our students and staff," Mitchell said.

Arnzen said Saffell Street had already conducted a school safety check earlier that morning before local law enforcement arrived to perform its own drill.

She said it was important for the students to feel comfortable and as safe as possible during lockdown drills.

Saunier agreed, adding that they made sure most of the officers were in uniform to make the kids comfortable with the presence of officers.

"We're going through everything we can," he said, "and everything we can think of to make everything as safe as possible."

Christian Academy administrator on school safety

Steve Carmichael, Christian Academy of Lawrenceburg school administrator, said school safety at the Academy isn't necessarily heightened by the Connecticut shooting because school safety is a "focused, ongoing, conscious effort from day one when you become a school administrator at any level."

Carmichael said in an e-mail interview that the Christian Academy, located in the former Early Childhood Center on Main Street, has a buzzer system and a camera for visual identification.

He said the school has a school safety committee that is reviewing the school's current plan and maki ng adjustments to allow for the Academy's building size and location.

Anderson Public Library to update its security policy

What happened in Connecticut is unlikely to happen at the Anderson Public Library, Library Director Pam Mullins said.

But she'd like to explore options to improve security in the library building so staff and patrons can be secure and call for help if necessary.

"Since we are a public facility, there are many options that schools have that aren't available to us," Mullins said via e-mail. "We obviously can't deny entry to the public or lock our doors during business hours."

Mullins said the library staff will be evaluating the children's programming room — mostly constructed out of glass — to see if the glass can be made opaque and an alternative exit can be created into the staff area.

She said the library will also look at changing locks on all programming, staff and storage areas so that they are lockable from the inside.

Other safety options the library is considering include:

- making access to staff areas by security coded keypads only
- upgrading security cameras
- changing some interior and exterior doors to have less glass
- replacing some wooden doors with steel or other more secure materials
- panic buttons at the desk to alert staff in the back and possibly the police

The library plans to conduct safety training for employees on how to protect themselves, Mullins said.

A meeting had been scheduled with a security technology firm for further recommendations, she said.

School district settles civil rights lawsuit

From staff reports

The Anderson County School District has settled a civil rights lawsuit brought by an instructional assistant, according to federal court records.

The terms have yet to be disclosed, but court records reveal that the district has agreed to a settlement with Kathy Campbell of 1077 Indian Trail Way, Lawrenceburg, who claimed her rights were violated when she lost her job at the end of the 2010-11 school year.

Campbell claimed that other classified employees with less seniority were able to keep their jobs, a violation of state statutes and board policy. She also claimed her rights were violated under the 5th and 14th amendments of the Constitution.

The district, through its attorney, originally denied the claims.

In her lawsuit, Campbell sought to recover lost wages and benefits, along with having her retirement service credit restored.

She also sought to recover attorney fees and "all other relief to which she may appear entitled."

Campbell was notified by letter in May of 2011 that, due to a reduction in workforce, her position with the school was being terminated after 11 years of employment, according to documents on file in federal court.

Later that month, Campbell hired an attorney and argued that others with less seniority were retained, including two people who had no prior experience at the high school, where Campbell worked.

Campbell filed her lawsuit in February of 2012 despite what she claims was an offer from Superintendent Sheila Mitchell to return to work as a cafeteria cook, and another offer to return to work as an instructional assistant, which Campbell subsequently accepted.

In all, she was out of work from May through October of 2011.

Campbell claims that after having her position eliminated, Mitchell called her in June of 2011 and offered the cafeteria position. Campbell claims that Mitchell expressed doubts that she could physically perform the job "due to a recent medical procedure," then called the Kentucky Unemployment Office to "advise that Campbell's claim for unemployment benefits should be denied because she had just made Campbell a job offer."

In August of 2011, Mitchell again contacted Campbell and offered to bring her back as an instructional assistant, this time to care for a student who travels each day to the Kentucky School for the Deaf in Danville.

Campbell balked, saying that her original position required her to be able to lift only 50 pounds. Mitchell's offer, she said, would require her to lift the 65-pound student as well as carry the student's wheelchair up and down stairs.

Both, she claimed, "are duties well in excess of the official job requirements of the Anderson County Schools' adopted instructional assistant job description."

But in October, Campbell signed the job offer, which ran only through the end of the 2011-12 school year and could only be renewed at Mitchell's discretion.

God, not his people, chooses life's many blessings

Jess Thompson
Faith columnist

Is God the center of your life?

A lot of us think so because we go to church maybe once or twice a week and maybe even throw a 20 in the plate. But, truly who is the God of your life? We often read in the Old Testament of warnings against worshiping idols. In instructing the Israelites in Exodus 20:4, God said, "You shall not make for yourself any idol in the form of anything."

Idols do not exist much in the American culture, or do they? The American dream focuses on money, status, jobs, homes, cars, etc.

This is absolutely not Christ-centered at all. I struggle with these items myself.

Perhaps idol worship is actually much more prevalent in America today than ever. These material blessings I just mentioned are absolutely forms of idol worship if they center your life more so than God.

Timothy Keller writes in his book Counterfeit Gods: "When your meaning in life is to fix someone else's life, we may call it 'co-dependency' but it is really idolatry. "An idol is whatever you look at and say, in your heart of hearts, 'If I have that, then I'll feel my life has meaning, then I'll know that I have value, then I'll feel significant and secure.'

"There are many ways to describe that kind of relationship to something, but perhaps the best one is worship."

The question is, who do you trust is in control of your life? Are you and your job or your checking account where you put faith in your future? If so, you are not placing God in charge of your life.

Isaiah 44: 9-10 says: "All who make idols are nothing, and the things they treasure are worthless. Those who would speak up for them are blind; they are ignorant to their own shame. Who shapes a god and casts an idol, which can profit him nothing."

When we place material blessings or personal achievements as our own strength, we deceive ourselves. God has given you ever single blessing at his choosing, not you.

Church is about the people, not the steeple

Nancy Kennedy
Columnist

Scattered throughout any community are tiny, struggling churches.

If you blink while driving past them you'll miss them. Or they're eyesores — run down, weather worn.

In my 20 years covering local religion for the newspaper, I've gotten to know the people at some of these little churches.

Why don't they admit defeat, close up shop and go somewhere else? And, why do they stay together?

I've always been part of churches that are so big that I don't know half the people, and so I don't understand a tiny church's dynamic or mentality.

Recently, I visited a small church in the community. The pastor, a woman, has been in this church since before she was born. Her great-grandfather was its founding pastor. The church has gone from 400 people to just a faithful few, and hers is another church that I've wondered why it still exists.

It all comes back to what the church is. If it's just a place to wear your new clothes, to sing a few songs and learn a few principles to make your life run more smoothly — well, you can do that anywhere. Or not do it at all.

But if it's a family reunion, if it's the place where the people you count as your brothers and sisters come together each week to practice your common family traditions, to learn about and celebrate your common faith and your Father's love, then whether you're few or a few hundred or thousand in number, your church is a precious place.

The size of the membership doesn't matter as much as the size of the love the people have for one another.

One of my most cherished parts of going to church each week is sitting in front of Harry and Charlotte Austin. At the end of the service, after all the songs and the offering, after the sermon and God coming and loving us, after the pastor's final prayer and benediction, every week I turn around and say, "Good stuff, huh Harry?"

If he and Charlotte aren't there, I miss them. I miss saying, "Good stuff." If I'm not there, I miss it, too. I think that's the way church should be. I think it makes Jesus happy.

DON'T TAMPER WITH HIS WORD

"Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the Lord your God which I command you." (Deut 4:2)

"Add thou not unto his words, lest he reproves thee, and thou be found a liar." (Proverbs 30:6).

"If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accused." (Gal. 1:9).

"Whosoever transgresses, and abides not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abides in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both The Father and the Son." (2 John 9).

"For I testify unto every man that hears the words of the prophecy in this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book. And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book." (Revelation 22:18-19).

Throughout the entire Bible, the reader, is not allowed to add one word or take away one word from the inspired book. The Bible is God's revealed will to mankind (2 Tim. 3:16-17) and every word is important. Woe to the man that would attempt to change one thing that God has said.

ENOUGH SAID!

Changes to help better serve you

John Herndon
Sports editor

They say change is inevitable. Sometimes we like it, sometimes we don't. But the bottom line is that we either have to recognize that simple fact of life or go crazy while we are left behind.

Such is the case with the sports pages in The Anderson News. We are having to make some changes starting with the Jan. 16 edition of the paper.

For some people, especially those who simply read the paper to stay abreast of what is happening in the sports world around Anderson County, the changes we are undergoing might never be noticed. However, to those who are active sports participants and those who like to submit items for publication, the changes could take some getting used to.

These changes, which I have discussed back and forth with Anderson News publisher Ben Carlson and others who are involved in the production of the paper, are ones that will allow us to continue our award-winning level of local sports coverage and investigative projects that you have come to expect from us.

Because of some changes in how we print the paper – and we think they are going to enhance your experience with The Anderson News, we had several printing options available for our sports. Without going into the play-by-play of how the paper is put together, suffice it to say we decided on the option that would allow us to continue to provide the highest possible level of local sports coverage.

To do that, we now have significantly earlier deadlines for the sports news submissions that are very important to our readers. Unfortunately, they are not flexible.

The first deadline to remember is that all submitted sports copy and photos must be in by noon on Thursday for consideration in the next week's paper. This includes announcements concerning upcoming events, schedules, news items, youth and church league sports scores and just about anything else that would not be "breaking" sports news.

I can already hear people saying, "What about my son winning a race on Friday night or me shooting an 18-point buck on Saturday? You mean I have to wait an extra week to see that in the paper?"

Nope. Not if you get the photo and information to me by 8 a.m. on Monday morning. We understand that a large portion of sports news happens over the weekend. But we also believe it is not unreasonable to ask that the information be submitted quickly.

Just e-mail me at jpherndon@theandersonnews.com or sports@theandersonnews.com with the information. If you have a photo, just attach a .jpeg file to an e-mail and send it in. Be sure that photos are set to the highest possible resolution. You can also use our website, www.theandersonnews.com, for submissions.

If you don't have a computer or don't do e-mail, you can mail it in or utilize our drop box, located on the south side of our office, next to the Best Western, and we will get it.

But weekend sports results must be in by 8 a.m. on Monday. Not 8:30. The easiest way to make sure results are in by our deadline is to send them in as soon as possible after the completion of an event. With so many electronic devices having e-mail capabilities, it should not be a problem.

Events that I normally would cover, such as high school football games, are not affected by the changes.

We can still use people who want to write or take pictures for publication. That is a huge help, especially in getting team news out. We can't pay anything at this time, but we will handle all of your credentialing so you are admitted to events as working media.

That is exactly how I got my start when Elliott Garrison, the former owner of The Anderson News, offered me the same opportunity when I was in high school. Let's just say that was a long time ago.

Then, after getting away from it for a while, I asked former publisher Don White for the chance again. He agreed. Several other writer friends have similar stories.

We don't care who turns information in. It can be a coach, a parent or a student. We just want the information, but with nearly 20 varsity teams just at Anderson County High School

TAMING THE TITANS

Bearcat defense smothers regional favorite to pull upset

By John Herndon
Sports editor

Defense has not won any championships in 2013 yet. The high school basketball calendar says that won't happen until late February and early March.

However, there can be little doubt that Anderson County's defense put a bit of a wrench in the 30th District race Friday night.

The Bearcats locked down and suffocated an explosive Collins attack to pull off one of the biggest upsets in Kentucky this season. Anderson's 55-43 victory threw the 30th District seeding race into a 3-way tie at the top and underscored Anderson's role as a factor in the district and Eighth Region race.

"The application of our defense was about as good as I have had in all my years," said Bearcat coach Glen Drury, who is now in his 28th season as a head coach, 26 of them at Anderson.

Indeed. Anderson County guarded the with the gusto of the Fort Knox security force. "Our defense played the best we have played ever," said Anderson senior Jay Smith. "We were able to hold (Collins star) Dez Marshall to two points."

The Bearcats led for all but 56 seconds. Their defense, whether in a man-to-man or the 2-3 zone that has served so well over the past few seasons, totally disrupted the Collins attack, limiting the Titans to 29.5 percent shooting. Marshall, who left the game with an ankle injury in the third quarter, scored his only basket on a thunderous dunk of the opening tip.

It might have been counter-productive.

"We hit a dunk on the first play of the game and we are cheering like we have won the district finals," said Collins coach Chris Gaither. "(Anderson's) players did not cheer until the end of the game."

Instead, the Bearcats guarded. Then they guarded some more. And they rebounded. Despite not having a player over 6-foot-3, the Bearcats outboarded the taller Titans 28-20, according to Anderson stats.

So tight was the Anderson defense that on one first-half possession, Collins passed and dribbled around he

Lady Bearcats strike early, cruise to district win

By John Herndon
Sports editor

All you need to know about Anderson County's self-made expectations could be wrapped up in last Friday's win over Collins.

The Lady Bearcats routed their 30th District rival, 59-34, easily the most one-sided outcome in the short 5-game history of the series, all Anderson wins.

And the Lady Bearcats did not play particularly well.

Anderson, which came into the contest ranked No. 2 in the Rating the State rankings, was never seriously threatened. Even during a lull that saw Collins shave 10 points off Anderson's 21-point lead over the final 4:55 of the first half, there was no panic. There was no sense that the Lady Bearcats should be put on any kind of upset alert.

"Obviously, we did some things well," said Anderson coach Tony Kays. "Our defense was good early, but then we had some miscues. We got caught on some screens and had some breakdowns."

But no one will complain with a 25-point romp past a district foe.

Juniors Makenzie Cann and Eriel McKee led Anderson with 25 and 19 points respectively as the Lady Bearcats won their seventh straight game and ran their record to 15-1. Anderson also won its 22nd straight game against 30th District competition.

Collins fell to 6-5 and 1-2 in district play.

McKee's put-back just 90 seconds in gave the Lady Bearcats a 4-2 lead they never relinquished. By the end of the first quarter, Anderson led 18-8 with McKee scoring 10 of her team's points. The lead mushroomed to 32-11 when Cann swished a 3-pointer that made it 32-11.

Collins did take advantage of some Anderson foul trouble, making its push with McKee and 6-foot-1 center Kali Whiteside on the bench with two."I felt confident when we came out in the second half," Kays said. "We had had a couple of starters on the bench. Having Kali and Eriel in foul trouble made a big difference.

"Obviously (Collins was) well-schooled and well-coached this week. They had practiced against our press. Not everything is going to work every night. Give them some credit for doing a good job."

Yet, Anderson was never in trouble.

"We did let up on them a little bit," said junior forward Alex Avritt.

Collins senior Aaliyah Wells tried to put her team on her back, scoring eight of her team's points in the 12-2 push that ended the first half. "Wells did hurt us some. She is a great athlete," Kays said.

Wells finished with 20 points, but it was far from enough to overcome an Anderson team that employed a business-like demeanor to notch the win.

"That is a tribute to our team," Kays said. "We are a good team. We wanted to establish ourselves as the frontrunner in the district.

All district games are important and we want to win them all."

And regardless of the polls say, games are played on the court. "We have to come into every game ready to play, no matter where we are ranked," Avritt said.

The teams will play again on Thursday, Jan. 24 at Collins under a new home-and-home format being used in the girls' 30th District this season.

Lady Bearcats bedevil Henry Clay

From staff reports

Anderson County rallied from an early deficit to defeat Henry Clay, 51-41, last Wednesday night in Lexington.

The Lady Bearcats fell behind early and trailed, 11-6, at the end of the first quarter, but outscored Henry Clay, 17-5, in the second to take control.

The Lady Bearcats dominated the final 24 minutes, building the lead to as many as 17 before coasting to the win. Henry Clay whittled the Lady Bearcat advantage to 47-41 with just over two minutes to play, but Makenzie Cann and Eriel McKee both sank a pair of free throws to give Anderson the 10-point win.

The Lady Bearcats improved to 14-1 with 13 of the wins being by double digits.

McKee led Anderson with 14 points while Cann added 13. Jessica Rice came off the bench to score 10.

BOYS' BASKETBALL

Bearcats rout Sayre in barrage of 3's

From staff reports

It is unlikely that anyone ever defending Sparta ever had to go up against the kind of attack Austin Cummins threw at Lexington Sayre Saturday night.

The Anderson County sophomore came off the bench to hit 6-of-8 three-pointers to lead the Bearcats to a tougher-than-expected 61-50 win over the homestanding Spartans.

Cummins tallied 18 points, but he was not alone as the Bearcats played bombs away over the Spartans' diamond-and-one defense designed to slow down Anderson's Jay Smith.

"It was the first time this year we had faced this type of a scouting report," Anderson assistant coach Bryan Hyatt said in an e-mail. "Sayre did a great job of limiting Jay's opportunities, which led us to shooting 30 three-pointers. The good news is we hit 13 and four different guys hit at least one."

Anderson jumped to a 20-11 lead as Christian Estes hit a trio of threes in the first quarter, but Sayre methodically whittled away at the lead and eventually went ahead at 37-35 when Quinn Pergande connected with 2:55 to play in the third quarter. The Spartans extended their lead to 39-35 before a pair of 3-pointers from Cummins put Anderson back in front to stay.

The Bearcats buckled down and pulled away to lead by as many as 15 points late in the game.

"The fourth quarter we picked our press up," Hyatt said. "This allowed us to create some turnovers and get some good shots. We also began attacking the diamond and one differently. We starting driving against it and then kicking out for some wide open three-pointers."

Four Anderson players scored in double figures. Following Cummins were Estes with 14, Luke Mann with 13 and Smith with 10.

The Bearcats notched their ninth win in a row to go 11-1 on the year. Sayre fell to 2-9.

Bearcats advance to Bracken final, but tourney falls to snow storm

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Anderson County looked like it was ready to defend its championship in the Bracken County Holiday Classic until Mother Nature put on a suffocating full-court press.

The Bearcats were to have played Boone County in the tournament final on Dec. 29 but a major snowstorm and resulting power outages in the Brooksville area prompted tournament organizers to cancel the final day of the tournament.

As of last Friday, no decision had been made on playing the championship game.

Anderson defeated Beechwood, 64-49 in the tournament opener on Dec. 26. Beechwood later won two games in the tournament to finish 3-5.

"Beechwood was a quality opponent," Anderson assistant coach Bryan Hyatt said in an e-mail. "They had size and strength and shot the ball well."

Anderson led throughout, but in the third quarter, Beechwood pulled within two points before the Bearcats' Christian Estes scored to stop the run. The Bearcats quickly pulled out to a 10-point lead and won going away.

"The game was much closer than the final score," Hyatt said.

The next night, Anderson routed Mt. Olivet Deming, 74-27. The tiny Robertson County school was winless in 12 outings after the tournament.

"We came out and pressed them from the start," Hyatt said. "They couldn't handle our pressure and the game was over quickly. We backed our press up mid way through first quarter."

In the final pool play game, the Bearcats whipped Bracken County, 74-47.

"We played well," Hyatt said. "They have a solid team."

Resolutions for better hunting, fishing in 2013

By Lee McClellan
Ky. Dept. of Fishand Wildlife Resources

It's the time of year for resolutions that make us feel good for a few days after making them, but lie in the junk heap of our actions by Valentine's Day.

For those who love to hunt and fish, a few resolutions for next year that should be kept will make each hunting or fishing trip much better in 2013.

Bring a good lunch: It is amazing how much planning goes into hunting or fishing trips. Buying the correct shotshells, replacing shot-through duck decoys, searching every tackle store within 100 miles for a card of the jigs that fooled the 6-pounder last year; these are the things hunters and anglers routinely do before a trip.

After all of that trouble to get everything in line for the special day, many hunters and anglers pick up their lunch at the convenience store on their way to the woods, field or lake. Buying lunch at such an establishment empowers our worst desires, so the meal consists of a can of Vienna sausages, candy bars, a pack or two of cheese crackers and soda to wash it down.

Save money and improve nutritional value by making a good lunch at home before leaving on your trip. A peanut butter, banana and sunflower seed sandwich on a firm, whole grain bread lasts all day without a cooler. Bring along a mixture of nuts in a sandwich bag along with some beef jerky for a protein boosting snack and some fresh fruit. This lunch, instead of highly processed mystery meats with sugary junk food as a side, will give the energy needed in late afternoon when the 7-pounder strikes or the 10-pointer appears from a thicket near your stand.

Respect those who mentor or offer their equipment: When someone mentors a hunter or angler or loans them equipment, they give a gift to the future of these arts. Show appreciation for the gift by offering to buy lunch for the mentor or give a small gift to those who lent you a shotgun or quality fishing rod. If someone offers you a spot on the back of their boat, give them gas money or make lunch for both of you. With the price of gas at or near all time highs, a day at the lake quickly turns expensive for the boat owner.

A vehicle towing a boat gets horrid gas mileage, often 12 miles per gallon or less. This expense in combination with the cost of boat gas makes a day at the lake easily a three-figure expense for the boat owner. By helping offset this cost, you remove some of the financial stress on the boat owner and move into prime position for a return invite.

Use the winter downtime for extensive equipment maintenance and repair: The stretch of winter from the first of January until early March usually brings a strong bout of cabin fever for the hunter or angler. Dreary winter days are great for the time-consuming major maintenance on your rifles, shotguns and fishing reels. Completely break down and clean your shotguns and rifles. The trigger assembly often gets overlooked during the routine cleaning of hunting season. Take this time to disassemble, inspect, clean and lubricate the trigger assembly.

Remove the handle and spool on your spinning reels. Use high quality reel oil and grease; those that form a molecular bond to the metal work extremely well. Clean and oil the main shaft that holds the spool. Apply a drop or two of oil to the roller bearing on your bail and to the handle shaft. Remove the side plate and apply one of the new reel cleaning solutions to dissolve old grease and remove debris. Pour out the gunk and let the inside of the reel dry.

Remember to lightly grease the worm gear at the bottom of the reel and drive gear toward the spool. Oil the bearing assemblies. On baitcasting reels, remove the spool assembly, usually via a turnkey on the reel's side plate. Clean any debris from the exterior of the reel with a toothbrush soaked in rubbing alcohol. Clean the inside of the pinion gear on the side opposite the turnkey and clean the spool assembly. Oil the spool bearing or bushing if so equipped. Never grease the spool shaft or you'll adversely affect the freespool performance of the reel. It will also make a funny noise when casting if you grease the spool shaft.

Upgrade fishing equipment with winter clearance sales: This is the best time of year to buy a quality spinning, baitcast or fly reel. Manufacturers introducing new models often unload the older models at fire sale prices in January and February. The clearance reels are just fine, considered the newest and latest model last summer. Check the clearance pages on websites of large catalog outfitters and you'll be surprised at the deals you'll find on high end reels and rods. The performance difference between a reel at the low end of the market and one from the high end is night and day. You'll enjoy the high end equipment much more. You get what you pay for in fishing equipment more than any other recreational gear.

The much longer service life of the quality reel saves money in the long run. As anglers gain experience, they want the performance features of the higher quality equipment. A common mistake is starting out buying the cheapest stuff on the market, then buying a marginally more expensive reel as experience demands before stepping up to a quality reel. If you save and buy a normally expensive reel at half-price on clearance, you'll avoid the cost of buying the cheaper reels and enjoy your fishing days much more.

This same progression often occurs with fishing rods as well. The light weight, sensitivity and casting performance of a fishing rod from a quality manufacturer blows away the cheap rod off the department store rack. Look for great deals on rods right now as well as on breathable waders, wade boots and rain gear.

Really good fishing sunglasses make a huge difference in seeing under the surface of the water and protecting eyes from UV rays emitted by the sun. The lenses on the better fishing sunglasses offer much greater clarity and they also retain their comfort all day long.

Franklin Showdown turns into Franklin beat down

Anderson demolishes four good teams, wins tourney

By John Herndon
Sports editor

FRANKFORT – The Capital City Showdown could have easily been called the Anderson County Beatdown.

At least that is what the tournament, held at Franklin County High School on Dec. 27-29, became during the Lady Bearcats romp to the championship. Anderson defeated four teams that had a combined 40-16 record by an average of nearly 22 points a contest. The only game that saw the Lady Bearcats win by single digits – a 45-38 win over Bishop Brossart in the opener – was also the game where Anderson coach Tony Kays rested three starters, including the tournament's Most Valuable Player, Eriel McKee, and all-tournament selection Makenzie Cann the entire fourth quarter.

The Lady Bearcats routed the host school, 58-25, in the championship game on Dec. 29. The final margin could actually have been worse. After beating Bishop Brossart on Dec. 27, the Lady Bearcats came back to demolish the defending state champions, Louisville Manual, 69-33, later that evening.

In the tournament semi-finals, the Lady Bearcats whipped perennial power Elizabethtown, 66-56, in a contest that some observers felt was far more one-sided than the score would indicate.

Throughout the tournament, Anderson was so impressive that it was reasonable to ask Kays if his team might peak before the all-or-nothing tournaments of late February and early March.

"Right now we are clicking. People worry about peaking early, but I don't think that is going to happen with this club. I think they will continue to get better," he said.

McKee erupted for 71 points in the three games while Makenzie Cann buried nine 3-point shots over four games. In the opener against Bishop Brossart, Kali Whiteside pulled down a whopping 16 rebounds while some previously untested reserves played well enough to grant Kays the opportunity to rest Cann, McKee and Destiny Stewart the final eight minutes.

Anderson 58, Franklin Co. 25

The championship game was over almost as soon as it started. Anderson reeled off the first 11 points as Cann swished a pair of threes and Corrin Robinson buried another inside the first 5:04.

"We dominated from the start in every facet of the game. Our energy was good, our focus was good," Kays said.

McKee led Anderson with 20 points. She also had eight rebounds and three blocked shots. Cann added 16 points, hitting 4-of-8 threes and dishing out four assists. Whiteside pulled down 11 rebounds while Alex Avritt dealt three assists.

"When you get off to a rough start, then things snowball," Kays noted. "(Franklin County has) a nice team. I can guarantee you when we come back down here for the last game, it won't be like this. It wasn't their night and we played our a-plus game tonight."

Anderson County 66, Elizabethtown 56

The Lady Bearcats defeated perennial power Elizabethtown in the semi-finals. While the final score says E-town was in striking distance, Anderson was never seriously threatened. The Lady Beracats led 17-9 after the first quarter and the Panthers never got closer.

"The kids came out focused," Kays said. "We only had six turnovers and the kids shot well. Our defense was better than average."

McKee led a balanced attack with 14 points, but seven different Anderson players had at least six points. Junior guard Destiny Stewart hit a trio of 3-point bombs. As a team, the Lady Bearcats sank 10 treys.

Elizabethtown would go on to finish third in the tournament, ripping William Blount, of Maryville, Tenn., 69-44 in the consolation game.

Anderson Co. 69, DuPont Manual 33

The defending state champions were never in it as the Lady Bearcats jumped to an 18-7 lead after the first quarter and never looked back.

Anderson had prepared to play Bethlehem but the Bardstown school dropped out of the tournament at the last minute. Manual had planned to play in a tournament in Springfield, Mo., but could not make that event due to the snowstorm that blanketed areas west of Louisville the day after Christmas.

'We had a rough practice the day before," Kays said. "If we had known we were going to play Manual, I would have probably backed off a bit."

Manual was playing without guard Morgan Allen, who was injured just before Christmas, but Anderson held 6-foot-1 center Kayla Styles to five points. Styles is rated as one of the top players in the city of Louisville.

McKee again led Anderson with 27 points while Whiteside added 14.

Anderson Co. 45, Bishop Brossart 38

Anderson struggled at times against the 10th Region foe, which eventually won the silver division of the tournament, or fifth place.

Yet, after Cann sank a free throw with 1:58 to play in the first half, the Lady Bearcats never trailed again.

Bishop Brossart, which finished the tournament at 11-3, took a 12-10 lead when Madison Eisenmann converted a steal into a layup midway through the second quarter. Brossart led by as many as three before Cann tied things with a 3-pointer that made it 14-14 with 2:30 left in the half.

Sophomore guard Marissa Walker hit 3-of-4 free throws down the stretch. Alex Avritt had also connected on a big basket then the Lady Bearcats cleared a side of the floor for her to drive.

Whiteside might have turned in the most impressive performance of her career, scoring 11 points and pulling down 16 rebounds to lead Anderson.

perimeter for well over a minute before taking a low-percentage shot.

"Austin Linzy guarded (Terez) Smith and did a great job. He took his defense seriously," Drury said. "Early in the season, he couldn't guard a post out there, but now, he is guarding and he is starting to love it."

Smith, a 6-7 leaper, had just four points.

But the Bearcats' mastery of Marshall, widely considered the top player in the Eighth Region, was unexpected by all except the Bearcat team. "Ross Cox's defense on Marshall was tremendous," Drury said. "Ross paid attention to all the details."

As did the Bearcat team, which were so in control that after Linzy drove for a basket with 3:01 to play, their lead had reached 18 points at 49-31.

"I think on offense, we were playing desperate," said Gaither. "We forced shots and played desperate."

Yet, even with little time to play, one never got the impression Collins was totally out of it until the Bearcats nailed four free throws in the final minute.

Collins sliced the lead to 51-43 on Buddy Johnson's 3-pointer with a minute to play, but the Titans could get no closer. In fact, after Luke Mann's three-point play put Anderson up 13-6 with 2:27 left in the first quarter, the Anderson margin dipped below seven points for one possession the rest of the way.

Mann scored 11 points on the night, including a pair of 3-pointers.

Somehow, Anderson's lead never seemed to be enough until Jay Smith's two free throws made it 53-43 with 58.5 seconds to play.

Part of that was the explosiveness Collins has shown all season. It showed when Marshall got free for the game-opening dunk and weighed heavily on Drury's mind through the contest. "Collins didn't bring their best game tonight. We know that," Drury said. "They are very talented. They can create turnovers and you have to take care of the ball against them."

Anderson's own carelessness almost did the Bearcats in. While the Bearcats certainly put together their finest outing of the season, they also turned the ball over 18 times. The final six possessions of the third quarter resulted in a missed layup, four turnovers and a desperation shot from Smith that fell well of the mark.

"We went off the attack somewhere," Drury said. "We went off the gas pedal too easy. When we went back on the attack we were able to break their press."

Gaither added, "They stayed solid through the game, even when they went through that stretch. That is a testament to the discipline Anderson County has as players."

Collins, which had trailed 32-16, went into the fourth quarter down only 32-24. But on the first possession of the final stanza, the Titans missed three easy shots before Terez Smith hit the second of two free throws with 7:41 to play.

Seven seconds later, Christian Estes drove for a basket, then after Masai Whyte's free throw drew Collins within 34-26, Linzy converted a three-point play. Whyte scored after a steal, but then Linzy sank a pair of free throws and Estes turned in his own three-point play to make it 42-28.

"The guards got me open," Linzy said. "I got a great pass and was able to lay it in."

Jay Smith added, "Estes and Linzy played great tonight. When we needed the basket, they came through.

Linzy tied Jay Smith for team scoring honors with 13. Smith also pulled down 10 rebounds and handed out five assists.

"As a team, our execution is so much better than it was early in the season," Drury said. "Jay Smith played a tremendous game, but when he goes out of the lineup (Smith picked up his fourth foul early in the fourth quarter) you see our execution drop."

But it did not drop enough to hurt the Bearcats Friday night.

"(Being the underdog) was a huge motivator," Linzy said. "We had practiced hard all week and we wanted this win big time. In practice, we went over the scouting report and Coach Drury went over everything they did. Then he worked our butts off."

"We always felt we could win," Jay Smith added. "When we got into the fourth quarter, we felt good. We had practiced so well and Coach Drury had us so well-prepared.

"It was just a really good win."

District race outlook

With Anderson County's win over Collins, those teams and Shelby County all have a 1-1 district record. All three have yet to play a good Spencer County team, which could easily defeat any of the other three teams. However, if the three schools finish the season in a tie at the top of the district, the tie-breaker, based on points allowed in district games, would come into play. Currently, Collins holds the edge in the tie-breaker with Anderson second and Shelby County third. If Spencer beats one or two of the teams, all ties would be broken by head-to-head competition.
